Press Release

Blackfox Training Institute, LLC., Headquartered in Longmont, Colorado reports that it officially launched a new program in September to prepare veterans for employment in the Aerospace Industry.

Longmont, CO, November 1, 2013:

Blackfox Training Institute reports that it officially launched a new program in September to prepare veterans for employment in the aerospace industry.

Approval under the provisions of "Title 38, United States Code" and recognition by the State of Colorado as an approved private occupational school qualifies Blackfox as a training center for eligible veterans wanting to use their GI Bill for educational benefits.

Recently, Blackfox has formed a partnership with the Colorado State Department of Labor and Employment Veterans Services in order to help find potential employers interested in hiring successful graduates of the Veterans Training Program.

The comprehensive 5 week program held at one of the Blackfox Training Facilities in Longmont, CO graduates with 4 IPC Certifications and 8 Blackfox Skill Certifications. On Veterans Day of this year (November 11th) approximately 15 veteran graduates of the program will be hired by a local Aerospace Company and positioned for a long-term successful career. Also on that same day, 15-24 veterans begin another training session leading to employment in the Aerospace Industry.

"This is the first program of its kind to provide veterans with military electronics experience as well of those with little to no industry experience with skills, training and certifications that will enable them to develop a promising career path within a growing industry," states Blackfox president, Al Dill. "We're honored to be a part of that." Blackfox looks to expand this program nationally in 2014.
